#KEYWORDS: DISCUSSIONS IN THE DIGITAL HUMANITIES

Posted on 2/8/2017 1:23:29 PM

The Center for Digital Humanities and Culture \(DHC\) is proud to announce #Keywords, an ongoing brown-bag lunch series this spring 2017 semester. #Keywords is an informal, educated discussion on key terms and language in use in the digital humanities today.

Our hope is that through a brief introduction and informal conversation you can become better acquainted with this terminology, what it means, how it works, and why students find it important.

No prior knowledge of any digital humanities topics are required to join in the conversation. We all hope to learn from one another and bring this knowledge into the classroom in the form of projects, handouts, and lesson plans.

The first event will be hosted on Wednesday, February 15, at noon in the Sutton third floor alcove. We'll be discussing Machinima, presented by Mark DiMauro. Food will be provided, so join us and let's talk about the future of the digital humanities!
